Hi Faculty,

Welcome back to Fall 2026! I hope your semester is off to a great start and that the first-week whirlwind is beginning to settle down a little.

As your SLO Faculty Lead, I'll be sharing occasional SLO reminders, resources, and updates throughout the year. My goal is to make our SLO work a little easier to navigate—and hopefully a little less mysterious.

A great place to start this semester is with one simple question:

How do I know the SLOs on my syllabus are the current, approved SLOs?

Take a few minutes to compare the SLOs listed on your syllabus with the official SLOs for your course. Our updated SBVC SLO website is a great starting point for SLO resources, guidance, and information:

2026-2027 SLO Master List

The Master List of Active Course SLOs is linked here for your syllabi and course documentation. This list is updated prior to the start of each Fall semester. SLOs are also officially located on the Course Outline of Record (COR) on CurriQunet Meta.

A quick syllabus check now helps ensure that what we communicate to students, what we assess during the semester, and what we ultimately report are all aligned.

While you're there, you'll also find resources to help with writing strong, measurable SLOs and understanding the assessment and reporting process. If you discover something that doesn't look right, have a question about your course SLOs, or simply want another set of eyes on something—please reach out.

SLO work should not feel like something you have to figure out alone. I'm happy to help, answer questions, troubleshoot, or connect you with the right resource. Questions are always welcome!

Wishing everyone a wonderful Fall semester,

Angie Vogel
