Outcomes Update	Angie Vogel shared that a faculty quick guide, accompanied by a rubric, has been developed and will launch in the Fall semester. During the summer, a brief tutorial will also be created, and the website will be updated to support the new system. Angie worked with Won Rhee at the District Office to implement the updated process. Previously, the process to notify faculty who needed to submit SLOs required emailing faculty individually, which was very time intensive. The new automated system now sends emails automatically starting Fall 2025. After the automated email is sent, a second reminder email is then sent three weeks later, followed by notification to the appropriate dean if responses are still outstanding. Deans then follow up directly with faculty in their divisions. The new automated process has significantly reduced the time commitment required of the faculty lead.
RSI Update	Three of the eight in-person trainings have been completed, with three additional back-to-back trainings scheduled for next week. All sessions are currently full. These trainings are intended for fully online courses only. The three-hour training sessions have been going well. Online training options are available for individuals who are
